For most people, a road trip conjures up visions of those by-chance discovered roadside oddities which give a rambling adventure its spice. I am no different though I suspect what moves me to pull over would cause most to drive on by. Nevertheless, I have tried to assemble a visual collection which represents my view of the world as seen through the rearview mirror, the images which exerted enough pull to get me yanking on the steering wheel to spin it around and take another look. Some of the images are old and some are new, but all seemed to warrant that second look in my mind. Here they are, see what you think What if truth had color? For Sarah Vines, truth is not black and white. She has synesthesia, a condition that creates the marriage of unrelated sensations. For Sarah, words have tastes with seeping flavors and colors she can touch. Odors evoke shapes and textures. Just thinking of her missing brother evokes a torrential rain, a God-sized pitcher of frigid water pouring over her, just like the cloudburst on the day he disappeared. The visions are even worse-the black veil that shifts ever so slightly in the air and transforms into a chiffon dress fluttering in the wind ... and a woman hanging from a tree. Hidden in her family's abandoned farm buildings are decisions you can't take back and want to bury as deep as the soil allows. Sarah's merged senses, dreamlike visions, and uncanny intuition guide her search for the truth, opening a Pandora's Box of secrets. The truth, a spectrum of light, guides Sarah to follow her dreams and pursue the path of forgiveness. ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Eileen Halvorson has an MBA and has taught English, speech, and acting. She lives in Minnesota on Lake Minnewaska, the setting for this novel. Her own experiences and dreams inspired this story. Photographer Richard Blair and writer Kathleen Goodwin share their passion for Point Reyes with photos and essays that capture the peninsula's landmarks, wildlife, people, and rugged spirit. With 237 color photographs and 21 duotones. H.D.'s writing continues to inspire generations of readers. Bringing together a number of never-before-published essays, this new collection of H.D.'s writings introduces her compelling perspectives on art, myth, and the creative process. While H.D. is best known for her elemental poetry, which draws heavily on the imagery of natural and ancient worlds, her critical writings remain a largely underexplored and unpublished part of her oeuvre. Crucial to understanding both the formative contexts surrounding her departure from Imagism following the First World War and her own remarkable creative vision, Notes on Thought and Vision, written in 1918, is one of the central works in this collection. H.D. guides her reader to the untamed shores of the Scilly Isles, where we hear of powerful, transformative experiences and of her intense relationship with the paintings of Leonardo da Vinci. The accompanying essays, many published here for the first time, help color H.D.'s astute critical engagement with the past, from the city of Athens and the poetry of ancient Greece. Like Letters to a Young Painter (2017), also published in the ekphrasis series, this collection is essential reading for anyone interested in the creative process. Jerry D. Glass was quite young when he wrote the poems in this book. He began writing at age 15 and by age 19 he had completed over 160 poems. Jerry wrote these poems with your mind in mind. They will take you on a mystical journey through color and time to places far away, through strange doorways to somewhere familiar yet strange. Watch time stand still, see the wind disappear as you slip into another world beyond the door. Experience the mystery and wonder as you journey through this collection of poems. Have you ever experienced life with conflict, constant problems and situations which resulted in change and emotional turmoil? Life often throws you into unfamiliar circumstances, leaving you with a lack of understanding and an overwhelmed feeling of uncertainty for your life. "My Visions, My Truths" is a collection of poems on how I successfully made it through my journey with God. Open your heart to these words and let the past go. Allow this book to foster creativity and grow from within. Inspire your future. Embrace each message as it resonates down to the core of your very being. Choose to live your life happily, once again. Visions of Faith is an 8x10 full color picture book that captures deep color and highly detailed images of icons within the church, photographed at an altered viewpoint. Quotes from various people caption each image and reflect on the content of the image. High definition imagery and moving colors that would make anybody appreciate the beauty of church interiors. Focusing on the house and museum and its considerable collections of architectural fragments, models, drawings folios and publications, this book is about thirteen Lincoln's Inn Fields in London, England, built in the early 1800s by the renowned eighteenth-century architect Sir John Soane. The book maps the influences, references, connections, extensions, and productions at play in Soane's house-museum. The house, still a public museum, was highly original in its period, and it continues to influence and impress architects and historians alike. Today's visitor is confronted by a dense, complex series of spaces, a strange accumulation of rooms, objects and effects. This book examines the ways in which Soane enlisted light, shadow, color, fiction and narrative, vistas, spatial complexity, the fragment, and the mirror to produce a spectacular space. Author F. Vincent Singletary has orchestrated a dialogue between five young men of color as they begin their journey into manhood. This intimate dialogue is realized through a collection of poems and short stories. Many people worry too much about things they can't control or change. This group of brothers believes they have the opportunity to change one boy's life. This collection traces their relationships as they change and grow into the brotherhood upon which they depend. Each individual needs loving people in his life—to mentor them and to be understanding friends. This compilation of work ponders the trials and tribulations facing the next generation and seeks to open their eyes to the visions that are theirs to claim. From mentoring to conversation to cultural struggles to succeeding in life, Poems from the Soul speaks from men of color to men of color. Color your way to understanding the interconnectedness of all life. Pamala Oslie offers a guide to aura colors of energy and how they correspond to four main personality types. She also describes 12 combination colors and includes a test to determine one's own aura color. ALIEN ADULT

Garland of Visions explores the generative relationships between artistic intelligence and tantric vision practices in the construction and circulation of visual knowledge in medieval South Asia. Shifting away from the traditional connoisseur approach, Jinah Kim instead focuses on the materiality of painting: its mediums, its visions, and especially its colors. She argues that the adoption of a special type of manuscript called pothi enabled the material translation of a private and internal experience of "seeing" into a portable device. These mobile and intimate objects then became important conveyors of many forms of knowledge—ritual, artistic, social, scientific, and religious—and spurred the spread of visual knowledge of Indic Buddhism to distant lands. By taking color as the material link between a vision and its artistic output, Garland of Visions presents a fresh approach to the history of Indian painting. "This unique and fascinating book, filled with brilliant photographs, offers a journey into the cosmos of the natural tooth. With cross sections and other unusual perspectives, these photographs demonstrate the unique structure and form of each tooth and their interplay with light reflection and absorption, both of which play decisive roles in the reconstruction of the tooth. Indeed, this understanding has greatly advanced the development and handling of new dental ceramics." "The author lures us into an extraordinary world of photography by which we experience the inner life and beauty of the natural tooth. This excellently designed volume will be of interest to not only dentists and dental technicians, but to anyone interested in the beauty of nature."--BOOK JACKET. Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America, Inc. All Rights Reserved You know those time when your brain 'sees' visions but no one else next to you can picture or understand them? HAIart (pronounced 'high-art') leverages fractal designs to induce your creativity to draw your visions so that you can share your mental imageries. Unlike other coloring books where you have to color in predetermined images, HAIart give you the power and creativity to perceive the images on 20 different fractals.

What jumps out at you and what story does each abstract design suggest? There are no right or wrong visions. Let your eyes and imagination run and use the fractals to outline and color the details of the images you see. There are endless possibilities with each fractal design! Share and tag your #HAIartlife on social media and explore other's creative imaginations. In the 14th century, beset by wars, plague, famine, and social unrest, French writers saw themselves in the winter of literature, a time for retreat into reflection. Yet, in the midst of their troubles, as this extraordinary study reveals, large number of Latin texts were translated into French, opening up new areas of thought and literary exploration. 8 color illustrations. Color was used in film well before The Wizard of Oz. Thomas Edison, for example, projected two-colored films at his first public screening in New York City on April 23, 1896. These first colors of early cinema were not photographic; they were applied manually through a variety of laborious processes—most commonly by the hand-coloring and stenciling of prints frame by frame, and the tinting and toning of films in vats of chemical dyes. The results were remarkably beautiful. Moving Color is the first book-length study of the beginnings of color cinema. Looking backward, Joshua Yumibe traces the legacy of color history from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the cinema of the early twentieth century. Looking forward, he explores the implications of this genealogy on experimental and contemporary digital cinemas in which many colors have become, once again, vividly unhinged from photographic reality. Throughout this history, Moving Color revolves around questions pertaining to the sensuousness of color: how color moves us in the cinema—visually, emotionally, and physically. During the first two decades of the nineteenth century, two of the most significant theoretical works on color since Leonardo da Vinci's Trattato della Pittura were written and published in Germany: Arthur Schopenhauer's On Vision and Colors and Philipp Otto Runge's Color Sphere. For Schopenhauer, vision is wholly subjective in nature and characterized by processes that cross over into the territory of philosophy. Runge's Color Sphere and essay "The Duality of Color" contained one of the first attempts to depict a comprehensive and harmonious color system in three dimensions. Runge intended his color sphere to be understood not as a product of art, but rather as a "mathematical figure of various philosophical reflections." By bringing these two visionary color theories together within a broad theoretical context philosophy, art, architecture, and design this volume uncovers their enduring influence on our own perception of color and the visual world around us. Peripheral Visions sheds new light on how today's peripheries are made, lived, imagined and mobilized. Focusing on space, mobility and aesthetics, it argues that peripheries require more visibility, and are invaluable for creating alternative perspectives on the globalizing present. God placed many parallels to the spiritual realm in the physical universe so the human brain could get some idea of the world that exists beyond the capacity of the human brain. One such parallel is the development of a baby in a mother's womb. Just as God took particles of the earth and made a body for the spirit he created, a woman takes the particles of her body and makes a body for a spirit that will live in that body. That body is developed in her womb and, at birth, that body becomes a womb for a human spirit. The author calls this newborn body The Womb of Time because it is the place where a human spirit is developed in time in preparation for an existence in a new world called Eternity. An embryo in a mother's womb is surrounded by chemicals that can prevent it from developing to a point capable of living in the world outside its womb. In the same way, a human spirit, in the womb of its body, is surrounded by knowledge, the curse from Eden that can prevent it from developing to a point capable of being a spirit with life when it enters eternity. If a physical body is stillborn, no matter how much it is loved it cannot exist with people who are alive. A human spirit that is not alive when its body dies cannot exist with the living who reside in Heaven. God is constantly trying to nourish people in their Womb of Time with the same Word of Life he used to create all things. The human brain, limited to the knowledge it contains, often substitutes confidence for faith and religion for God causing many human spirits to be stillborn when they leave their body. Man's battle is between knowledge and faith. A quick look at the world will reveal the incompetence of knowledge. Palestinian cinema arose during the political cinema movements of the late 1960s and early 1970s, yet it was unique as an institutionalized, though modest, film effort within the national liberation campaign of a stateless people. Filmmakers working within the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) and through other channels filmed the revolution as it unfolded, including the Israeli bombings of Palestinian refugee camps, the Jordanian and Lebanese civil wars, and Palestinian life under Israeli occupation, attempting to create a cinematic language consonant with the revolution and its needs. They experimented with form both to make effective use of limited material and to process violent events and loss as a means of sustaining active engagement in the Palestinian political project. Palestinian Cinema in the Days of Revolution presents an in-depth study of films made between 1968 and 1982, the filmmakers and their practices, the political and cultural contexts in which the films were created and seen, and their afterlives among Palestinian refugees and young filmmakers in the twenty-first century. Nadia Yaqub discusses how early Palestinian cinema operated within emerging public-sector cinema industries in the Arab world, as well as through coproductions and solidarity networks. Her findings aid in understanding the development of alternative cinema in the Arab world. Yaqub also demonstrates that Palestinian filmmaking, as a cinema movement created and sustained under conditions of extraordinary precarity, offers important lessons on the nature and possibilities of political filmmaking more generally.
